PROPOSALS

BY BENJAMIN EDES & CO.
OF BALTIMORE,
For Publishing a New and Valuable Work, by Subscription, entitled,
An Universal Dictionary
OF
Commercial Geography;

CONTAINING all that relates to the situation and extent of every commercial state in the world, and a comprehensive and correct account of their agriculture and products, their manufactures, fisheries and mines, and the commerce resulting therefrom—their laws, customs, tribunals and administrations of commerce—their land carriage and navigation; their banks and commercial companies; their monies weights and measures; their exports and imports; their exchange and the balance of trade; their colonies &c. &c. arranged in alphabetical order—From the French of J. Peuchet, author of the Dictionary of Police, of the Methodical Encyclopaedia, &c.

☞ The publishers have been at great expense in obtaining the only translation, revised and corrected by gentlemen of well known talents, which will make about 15 vols. 8 mo. containing 600 pages each, dedicated to the Merchants of the U. S. Copy right secured according to law.

The work now proposed to the public may be said to be a minature view of the commercial world, unfolding the commerce of every clime. It combines the experience of past ages with the trade of the present day. In the author's preliminary discourse and introduction, will be found a most interesting history of commerce from remote ages pregressively until the publication of the work, together with the tables of the money of the different nations of the world; tables of the old and present weights, & measures of distance, surface, solids and capacity in France, adopted since the revolution, &c. &c. Therein all the intricacies and labyrinths of trade are brought into one view.

The high estimation in which the Commercial Geographical Dictionary is held in Europe, induces the publishers to cherish a hope that in their expectations of remuneration they will not be disappointed. They know not of any work in the English language on the subject of which it treats, of so general importance.

Gentlemen acquainted with the real merits of the work will be highly gratified in seeing it in Engligh dress, to effect which the publishers have not hesitated to encounter every obstacle, and brave every expense. They are determined that the work shall be executed in a style which shall not deteriorate the character of the American press.

CONDITIONS.

The work will make at least 15 large octavo volumes, containing 600 pages each, and printed on a new type and paper of a good quality.

It will be delivered to subscribers bound in boards, at $3 for each volume, payable on delivery. To non subscribers the price will be enhanced.

It is expected one volume will be delivered each month from the commencement. A list of the patrons of the work will be added to the last volume.

☞ Subscriptions received at this office.

ODE TO MAY.

Hail, beautious May, thou verdant queen of spring;
Whose fragrant sweets, mov'd ancient bards to sing;
At thy approach the flow'ry meads look gay,
And feather'd songsters chaunt their warbling lay:

The swelling buds disclose the op'ning flowers;
And tender plants rise by thy genial showers;
Thy roseate morn the pearly dew displays,
The gentle zephyrs fan the noon-tide rays.

Sweet gardens bloom, in thy prolific reign,
While grass and herbage deck the verdant plain;
The blossom'd orchard dress'd in rich array,
And roses breathe the sweet perfumes of May.

The waving forests, clad in native green,
Add pleasing lustre to the rural scene;
While variegated lawns and flow'ry vales,
Bear fragrant odours through the gentle gales

But, ah! how soon thy vernal beauties fade;
Emblem of youth, in all thy charms pourtray'd;
Though youth and beauty wither and decay,
Virtue hath charms that never fade away.

SONNET.

What fair one is this, more serene than the light,
Than the dews of the morning more chaste,
Resplendent in glories that dazzle the sight,
At her feet flow the streams of celestial delight,
To mortals she cries "Freely Taste."

'Tis happiness, sought and desired by all,
Which few—ah! how few do attain,
Dread nemus guard the pass, and with fetters enthral
The soul that most fondly vibrates to her call,
Mark a few of the Infernal train.

First, Envy who sickens when others are blest,
Or grins o'er the wrecks he displays,
Malignity knaws, like a vulture, her breast,
While the virtue's or fame of another's confess'd
From the fair brow of worth wrest's the bays.

Next calumny arm'd with fell quiver & bow,
With a frontlet of brass takes the field,
"Down merit, (she cries) be your honors laid low,
I hate truth's effulgence—of genius the glow,
You all to my prowess must yield"

But who is that sly fiend who cautious appears,
And envious slanders disclaims?
'Tis ridicule—laughing she hushes all fears,
When sudden her Stygian dipp'd falchion she rears,
How sure, and how deadly her aims.

To life thus encompass'd with evils around,
Then where shall the mind flee from pain?
Will the white plume of peace on this globe ne'er be found?
Is vice with impunity priviledg'd to wound?
Is rectitude cherish'd in vain?

I said with a sigh—when a bright beaming form,
Descended in pearly array,
As when the dark umbrage of vapors deform
The face of the sky—'mid the loud howling storm,
Eol darts forth a sweet lucid ray.

"Attend to my voice, she benignantly said,
"Here's a refuge that shields from all harms,
I am destin'd by Heaven the helpless to aid,
To ward off each arrow their peace would invade,
Who fly for repose to my arms.

These joys I dispense which the world cannot give,
Nor powers of darkness destroy:
Haste! seize the rich gift while 'tis offer'd, and live,
"Press on to the mark, and you soon shall arrive,
Where bliss flows without an alloy."

THE MONITOR.

The following form of devotion used by one of the ancients is suitable to blind mortals of Adam's race, who know not, nor can know precisely, either the quantities or the qualities of wordly enjoyment most conducive to their own good, "Give me whatsoever may be good for me, though I should neglect to pray for it; and deny me whatsoever would be hurtful, tho' I should ignorantly make it the object of my supplications." The ways of Divine Providence are mysterious, but unerring; its kindness is manifested frequently in withholding as well as in giving; as well in restraints as in indulgences; as well in disappointments as in crowning our wishes with success. How oft, in our journey of life, has Providence thwarted our inclinations, and by this means prevented our wanderings? How oft have we been walking blindly upon the edge of a precipice, prepared to take the fatal leap, when an invisible power diverted our course by disappointing us of our purpose? How oft have incidents that seemed evil to us at first, been productive of good; and how oft might the things which our hearts desired and of which Providence disappointed us, been hurtful in the enjoyment? As little children cry for things that would injure them, and struggle with the hand that restrains them from running into dangers; so we children of a larger size, but in many instances not knowing what is good to ourselves, frequently desire with most eagerness what would be most for our hurt, and perversely repine even at those providential restraints and trials which are the effects of a merciful purpose.

"During the violence of a storm," says a German fable, "a traveller offered up his supplications, and besought Heaven to assuage the tempest. But the storm continued with unabating fury; and while he was drenched with the flood, fatigued with his journey, and exposed without shelter, he became peevish, and even complained aloud of the ways of Providence. Approaching at length the borders of a forest, he said to himself, "Here I shall find protection, notwithstanding Heaven has neglected me, and turned a deaf ear to my prayers." But as he went forward a robber sprang out suddenly from behind a bush, and the traveller, affrighted at the prospect, fled out of the forest, exposing himself again to the tempest of which he had so grievously complained.

The robber, in the mean time, fitting an arrow to his bow took exact aim; but the bow string being relaxed by the moisture of the weather, the arrow fell short of its mark, and the traveller escaped unhurt. As he continued his journey a voice proceeded awful from the clouds: "Cease, mortal, to repine at the Divine dispensation; and learn to acknowledge the goodness of God in refusing as well as in granting your petitions. The storm which you complained of so bitterly has been the means of your preservation. Had not the bow string of your enemy been rendered useless by rain, you had fallen a victim to his violence."

From the Virginia Patriot.

At the time Mr. Adams received his appointment of minister to the Russian court, it was the universal opinion of some very honest people, both in and out of Congress, not to be able to foresee what good could possibly result to this country, from his mission.—To all such we would recommend a perusal of the foreign articles, under the heads of Gottenburg and Petersburg, which may be found in our columns of to day. They will there find, that one object, at least, which Mr. Adams had to accomplish was, the exclusion of our ships from Russian harbors! Do not stare at this, fellow citizens: I tell you nothing but the truth, nothing which the paragraphs alluded to will not confirm. Read them, and convince yourselves. You will there find that John Quincy Adams, the apostate, has been sent to Russia with an outfit of nine thousand dollars of the people's money and a yearly salary of nine thousand more; not to adjust existing differences, for we have none; not to procure for our citizens new privileges and immunities; but—"tell it not in Gath, publish it not in the streets of Askelon"—to beg the Russian government to assist our own, in aiding "OUR KING NAPOLEON" to destroy what little commerce is yet left us unmolested.

This is certainly a refinement in diplomatic policy, till now unthought of: it is even an improvement upon our own celebrated embargo system, and might be made to form a very useful appendix to it; since all those who escaped, here at home, would be kidnapped abroad. With this new improvement in the system, an ambassador may, hereafter, be made to a government, what a decoy duck or a stool pigeon is to a fowler: a convenient lure to draw his friends into the snares of an enemy. In old federal times, we used to maintain embassadors at foreign courts for the purpose of preserving our citizens and their property from the grasp of foreigners; but the democratic ingenuity of modern days has exploded such musty, aristocratic notions as these, and discovered that the only use of embassadors, at the present day is to assist a foreign tyrant in trampling upon our privileges.

The pretence about the prostitution of our flag, is too flimsy to cover for a moment such a barefaced attempt, by our own accredited agent, to destroy our commerce. It is perhaps an excuse which Napoleon might urge in defence of such a measure; but to hear it advanced by the representative of the American people, is an outrage upon all decency, that might even make a tyrant blush. That prostitutions of our flag actually exist, I have not a doubt.—Ours is the only neutral flag upon the ocean: it would therefore be extremely singular, if other nations should not attempt to profit by the use of it. But are we to have nothing; because there is a possibility that we may abuse what we have? Shall we cut out the tongues of our citizens, because they may "prostitute" them to slanderous or idle purposes; shall we forbid them the use of their hands, because those hands might be devoted to the commission of evil; or, because a bale of goods may now and then be smuggled, are we to prohibit importation altogether? If our flag is prostituted, so are all flags in similar situations; and it is quite enough if the injured nation be permitted to punish the guilty, without involving the innocent in the same common fate.

How wonderfully impartial our government must be, thus to volunteer their services in support of the "continental system!" For it is too plain for an idiot to mistake it, that this blow was aimed by our embassador principally at England—another link in the grand chain which Napoleon has been so long and so industriously forming to exclude English productions from the continent. I should, however, be very much obliged to some of those who perhaps are in the secret, if they would please to inform me for which one of Napoleon's numerous acts of friendship towards us, we have condescended to make him this very dutiful and affectionate return. Is it for his Berlin decree; or is it for his kindness in imprisoning our seamen; or is it for his tender mercies in burning our ships; or is it for sequestrating our property; or is it for licencing privateers to cruise against our commerce; or for what other or greater benefit is it, that we are so gratefully obsequious?

From the Connecticut Courant.

ON THE CULTIVATION OF HEMP.

IT is believed that there is at this time no crop that so well compensates the labors of the husbandman as that of hemp. Many persons have erroneously supposed that it required a peculiar soil and that its cultivation was attendant with much uncertainty—It is now however ascertained from daily experience, that not only the fertile banks of the Connecticut and Genessee rivers, but most of our own warm uplands, if properly prepared, produce it in abundance. As evidence of the profits of the cultivation of hemp, I would state that thirty five dollars per acre have been paid for one year's use of land for this purpose. And I am creditably informed that the town of Long Meadow, has received at Boston, N. York and New Haven, thirty five thousand dollars for one year's crop. An average crop from land in good heart may be considered from eight to twelve hundred weight per acre; and the land if properly taken care of the second year will produce more than the first. A judicious farmer in my neighborhood lately told me that he had taken 800 weight off an acre last year, and had no doubt that with little more attention he should this year get at least twelve hundred weight. I have noticed in the Courant that 415 dollars per ton had lately been paid in Boston for hemp raised at Long Meadow—this is a very unusual price—It has been considered a fair peace price at two hundred dollars, when our intercourse was open with Russia; and at that it will pay vastly more than any other crop, as may be seen by the following very liberal estimate of cultivating and dressing the product of one acre of land that is in good order.

12 Loads of manure	12 00
Ploughing and harrowing 3 times	6 00
2 1-2 bushels of seed at 4 dolls.	9 00
Sowing and harrowing	1 00
Pulling and carting	8 00
Breaking and swingling	15 00
	46 00
Sure profit per acre,	54 00
Half a ton at $ 200 is	100 00

The above estimate which is undoubtedly as high as it should be, would be reduced considerably by having the hemp dressed in a mill, for which purpose a number are already erected about the country, and by converting the stocks or shives into manure, which purpose they answer to a considerable degree.

There exists no danger from a glutted market, it will never be imported cheaper from abroad, and should we go successfully into the cultivation of it, for many years to come we should not more than equal the demand there would be, as soon as our ships were permitted to spread their sails upon the ocean.

The following method of cultivation has been practised with great success.—The ground if not already broken up to be thoroughly ploughed in the fall, that the turf may be well rotted; and in the spring, as early as the season will permit, to be ploughed again with more or less manure, according to the condition of the land; the ploughing to be repeated till the soil becomes light and mellow; that which is peculiarly proper would not require more than two ploughings in the spring; the seed to be sown and well harrowed in, on a very even surface, from the 1st to the 10th of May, that it may be out of the way of frosts, by which it is liable to be injured. When the blossoms fall from the male hemp, as it will do about the middle of August, it is to be pulled by making alleys through the field, and selecting the male from the seed hemp, which is to be left a month longer to ripen—To be bound with rye straw in small bundles and left a few days in the field to dry that the bark may be tougher and not injured in moving, the bundles to be laid under the water to rot from ten to twenty days according to the weather, as it rots much the faster in warm weather. Clear, standing soft water is the best for this purpose, and salt water, by a recent English publication is considered altogether inadmissible. After it is sufficiently rotted which is easily ascertained by drying and breaking a little of it, the bundles to be dried in the open air, and when thoroughly dried to be housed; when dressed first, to pass through a coarse brake and afterwards through a common one and swingled like flax.

The seed hemp is to be pulled as soon as the seed begins to fall from the stalk, and to be bundled and carried immediately to the place where it is to be threshed, there to be set up in the sun a few days and then gently threshed; and again put in the sun a few days more and afterwards threshed again; it is then to be treated as before directed for the male hemp.

This may serve as a general direction, but the intelligent farmer will make such experiments as his land, his situation and his convenience will permit, and by communicating the result, will confer an obligation on that class of society of which the writer of this is one.

FOR SALE,

At the town of Occoquan, on the 26th day of May next, at Public Auction,

That valuable MILL SEAT,

late the property of Elisha Janney,

SITUATE in the said town of Occoquan. On this scite was erected, about eleven years ago, a spacious three story BRICK MILL HOUSE, which ever since has been occupied as a manufacturing mill, until about twelve months ago it was destroyed by fire—the stones and bricks of the former walls, and the iron work of the building are upon the spot, and would answer for a new mill, which might with these aids, be erected in time to grind the growing crop of wheat.

The advantages appertaining to this valuable property, which in the driest season never wants water, being furnished by the Occoquan river, are so generally known as not to need a particular enumeration: suffice it to state, that it is situated in a healthy and flourishing little town at the Falls of the river, about 16 miles south of Alexandria, on the great stage road, leading north and south—in the heart of a wheat country—and has navigable water to the mill door, where vessels may come of sufficient burthen to carry 500 barrels of flour. With this valuable seat for water works of any description, there may be had about 250 acres of well timbered land, lying on the opposite side of the river.

For this property one-tenth of the purchase money will be required in hand, and the residue in three equal annual payments, with interest from the day of sale.

SATURDAY, MAY 26,

MR. SNOWDEN,

You have published a bill now before our Council relative to what we the citizens shall not do—and what they the Council will do—regarding certain wells. Will you endeavor to obtain such addition to said bill as shall regulate some other matters, intimately connected, now and heretofore, with said wells. No, we pray you, find out and inform us, of the farther intention of the Council, respecting this very delicate and all interesting subject—whether they will substitute the Madrid or Edinburgh customs for the wells. There being some Scotchmen in the Council, but no Spaniards that we know of, some of us suppose that the Edinburgh plan will prevail, and much agreeable convenience is anticipated through its adoption: for then no one need fear to go abroad, even under circumstances that have usually, heretofore, inflicted confinement; since on any crisis, however sudden or unlooked for, they will be certain of meeting, at the instant, some pleasant itenerant temple of relief, with which our city will then abound—or, whether every one may, according as momentary but urgent exigence shall dictate; or inclination with better leisure, will permit; resort to the streets, to the fields, or to the river side instead of the wells aforesaid. We would pray, if it be the pleasure of the Council, that the river be made the sole depository; as in that case we might reasonably and fairly hope for a very great and pleasing improvement in our fish market—and this probable consequence, it is not doubted, will be a very important consideration and powerful inducement to its adoption. The female part too of the community must advocate this measure, since they will derive particular benefit and gratification, from its expected improvement of the process of household washing, to say nothing of its agreeable effects in culinary operation.

In truth, Mr. Snowden, we are anxious to know where and how the Council do intend that we and our successors shall do, what we and our predecessors have always used to do at the wells aforesaid. We are plain men, Mr. Snowden, and do not pretend to see so deep into these things as the projector of this bill can do; but we do humbly conceive that if the Council have determined to revolutionize our present long established custom in so very important a matter as the abolition of the wells, that the Council is morally bound (law is out of the question here) to adopt and decree some other uniform means to answer the same ends as the wells do—that every one may know how they can, by law, do their business—or that the Council do ordain that no citizen, particularly after ten years hence, shall ever have any necessary occasion for either well or substitute of any kind.

Pray, you Mr. Snowden, do have this matter placed again before the Council, and by reporting their farther solemn will thereon favor all the More empty treasuries than ours.—The consequences of complying with Bonaparte's anti-commercial system, have been precisely similar on both sides of the Adantic.—— Russia has lately by an Ukase declared her treasury to be bankrupt. The miserable king of Denmark is worse than bankrupt. Whilst his own subjects will not trust him, he is compelled to mortgage his province of Holstein, and, we suppose, all our Tonningen property with it, to the Dutch to obtain supplies of money. According to late accounts, which the reader may peruse under the Salem head, Bonaparte is thought to be about to foreclose the mortgage by taking the property into his possession. In doing this, we wish more than we can hope, he may not, like a gripping landlord, seize the moveables which do not belong to his debtor.

That our treasury is as empty as that of either Russia or Denmark, Mr. Gallatin has candidly informed us; and we know the drain has been occasioned by the same means which exhausted theirs, that is to say, the hand of Bonaparte has done it.—— To all he dictated his system of living without trade. His agent, Jefferson, acquiesced and sent a message to congress for laying the embargo, & it was laid. But the scorn of an impartial world and the contempt of posterity will never forsake the authors of our dishonor and ruin. We envy them not the votes of democrats, for the honest and sincere among them will not very long be their dupes, and they are welcome to all the incense with which the tainted breath of faction can comfort them.

EXTRACTS OF LETTERS FROM LONDON,

PER PACKET.

March 19.

"Accounts from Naples, 24th of Feb. announce the arrival there of the schooner Nancy, captain Holman, from Salem, captured on entering the port, in company with schr. Fortune, capt. Martin, and schooner William, capt. Turner.

"The king of Naples had returned from Paris, and some hopes were entertained that he would encourage commerce, and cause these vessels to be liberated. On the other hand the seizure and sale of American vessels that took place in Naples early in Jan. is a presumptive proof that these will share the same fate.

"The American cargoes that had been seized at Naples, were sold by government for the following advantageous prices:—— white sugar, 70 to 80 ducats per cantar; brown do. 60 to 70, coffee 85 to 95, pepper 86 to 92, logwood 46, indigo 4 1 2 per lb.

"Mr. Peabody's ship Francis, laden with pepper, and Mr. Thorndike's schr. Dove, with fish, are in the same predicament with the vessels above named."

March 26.

"Letters from Naples to the 27th Feb. are just received. American affairs remain in the same state. No decision had been made on the vessels last seized.—— Three others had arrived and were equally detained:—Schr. Mary, Derby, of Salem, with fish and sugar, belonging to Mr. Fairfield, to Falconer, and Co. schr. Louisiana, fish and sugar, belonging to William Gray, Esq. from Salem, to Vallin, Routh & Co. brig John, of Newburyport, to the American consul."

March 31.

"We have nothing novel from Hamburg, only a confirmation of the increased and increasing restrictions on trade, the dullness of the markets, to be made worse by the recent arrivals at Tonningen, if the cargoes are admitted. As yet I see no reason to alter my opinion in regard to the hazardous situation of property in Holstein. If it is safe, that is entirely owing to Bonaparte's forbearance, and not to any protection which so weak and submissive a power as Denmark can afford. By the last letters from Leghorn it appears that shipments to Naples may be set down as lost, as the sale of every thing was ordered, and in progress, and the proceeds destined to replenish the public chest."

FROM THE NORTH.

Extract of a letter to a gentleman in this town, dated

"Gottenburg, March 21.

"Our commerce in Europe is in a much more critical situation than it was last year. There is now every danger attending our trade to the north.——Bonaparte has the whole continent so completely under his direction, that it is impossible to determine where to proceed with safety. I have been to Copenhagen by land, and have obtained the best information possible with respect to the situation of the continent.——This country once so famed for its independence is now under the immediate direction of Napoleon; whatever he says is law and the people must obey. The king of Denmark I fear will soon be no longer king; he is so poor that his subjects will not loan him any money; and Holstein, the best part of his dominions is given to Holland as security for a loan of four millions of guilders, which he had from them about five months ago. The French are daily expected to take possession of it. War is expected to take place this summer between France and Austria on the one side, and Russia on the other; and should Alexander have to oppose them both he must inevitably fall.

"The Danish privateers are again coming out, it is said, under great restrictions; but they will abuse any law their king may make."

NEW YORK, May 23.

Captain Marshall, who arrived here last night, sailed from Gottenburg on the 17th of last month; at which time it was reported, that the Danes had orders to take all the American vessels they should fall in with; and it was generally supposed, that Bonaparte would soon have the regulation of the Commerce of Sweden. A French agent had arrived at Stockholm, and another at Gottenburg. Markets dull at Gottenburg, except for sugar and logwood.—— Cotton was about 37 cents.

The accounts from the Havanna, of the 2d inst. are of a satisfactory nature. Advices had reached that place of the advances of the French in Old Spain; of their investment of Cadiz; and of the establishment of the new Regency in the Isle de Leon (Cadiz) and to which authority the government of the Havanna (and of Cuba) had publicly acceded, without any tumult, dissatisfaction or desponpency, among the people. It was rumored yesterday morning that the colony of Cuba had declared itself independent; but this arose from a very cursory view of some Spanish papers, of considerable length received by the gentleman to whom we are indebted for this article, and who mistook the nature of their contents. Letters of the first authority received by this gentleman state that the ports of Cuba would be speedily and freely opened to the British and Americans, and the duties reduced.

Captain Place's account therefore in our paper of yesterday, is entitled to full credit, which states that those events had already taken place.

We have seen letters from Havanna, from the most respectable sources, which confirm the news published in yesterday's Gazette on the authority of capt. Place. This change will prove immediately important to the commerce of the U. States.

Valuable Property For Sale.

I WISH to sell my farm on Coan River in the county of Northumberland, state of Virginia, containing 700 acres; about 400 acres of which are covered with pine and oak timber of the first quality. The arable part of this land will, under a judicious system of cultivation, yield fine crops of Indian corn, wheat, rye, barley, hemp, flax and cotton, and the various kinds of artificial grasses; the pasture yielding wild onion and other natural herbage affords, with the woodland, a fine range for sheep and horned cattle: This land is situate nearly equi-distant from Alexandria, Baltimore and Norfolk. From the city of Washington to the Bay there is not, on either side of the Potomac, a more valuable tract of land of equal dimension—the value of the timber, the richness of the soil, the facility with which its produce can be conveyed to three opulent commercial cities, will amply reward the exertions of the experienced and industrious farmer. It has several springs of excellent water; and the adjoining creek and river abound with fish, wild fowl and oysters.

The purchaser may be accommodated with the stock and farming utensils on easy terms Amongst the stock is a small flock of about 100 fine wool sheep. A sample of their fleece has been sent to Philadelphia, where from the fineness and softness of its staple, it will bring from 70 to 80 cents per pound, if proper care be taken of the sheep in winter: And by crossing this breed with Spanish Merino Rams, it is the opinion of many respectable farmers, that the wool produced from the crossed breed will be equally valuable, in every point, to that of the best Spanish sheep.

I will also dispose of a small piece of land about two and a half miles from town, being part of a tract known by the name of STUMP HILL:—It contains 12 acres, 9 of which are cleared and well enclosed: part of that which is cleared has produced luxuriant crops of clover forthree years successively. There are on it a small unfinished FRAME HOUSE, a HUT fit for negroes; some apple and peach trees; and a perpetual spring of good water. The situation is high and healthy.

Also a handsome convenient dwelling house now in the occupancy of Mrs M'Kenna, with a good cellar, kitchen, smoke-house, stable &c. &c It is situated in a healthy and agreeable part of the Town. The above described property is perfectly free from all incumbrance, and the title is unquestionable. Cash, or Bank stock of any of the Banks in the territory of Columbia and Baltimore, will be expected in part payment: a liberal credit will be given for the remainder. For further particulars apply by letter to the subscriber at the Bank of Alexandria.
